Cambridge Digital Humanities

Professor Yuqin Jiang

Yuqin Jiang is a Professor of Comparative Literature at Shenzhen University, a vice director of Jao Tsung-I Institute of Culture Studies, a director of Digital Humanities Studies at the school of Humanities, a Fellow of Committee of the Chinese Comparative Literature Association, and a former visiting fellow at University of Cambridge (2023-2024), University of Toronto (2014-2015).

Jiang primarily focuses her research on cyborg narrative, sci-fi poetics, digital humanities and science fiction studies, postcolonial literature studies, and cultural theory studies. She has edited books titled The New Integration of Science and Technology with Humanities: Research on Science Fiction in the Perspective of New Liberal Arts (Nanjing University Press, 2024), Interviews with Contemporary Chinese Science Fiction Writes (Nanjing University Press, 2023), and authored two books: Writing Politics: A Survey of Postcolonial Literature (Jiangxi People's Publishing House, 2013) and Theoretical Imagination: Northrop Frye's Cultural Criticism (China Social and Science Publishing House, 2009).

Additionally, she has also published over 40 literary and theoretical essays on various subjects, including cyborg theory, cyborg narrative, postcolonial ecocriticism, science fiction studies, post-colonialism, cultural criticism, and English literature in numerous domestic and international journals.

Position:

Affiliate; Former Visiting Fellow

Period:
Sep 2023 – Mar 2024

Email:
jyq@szu.edu.cn

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge Digital Humanities

© 2026 Cambridge Digital Humanities. All RIghts Reserved.
Web Design by Chameleon Studios